Human Animals in Ted Hughes' Poetry: A Thorough Study of the Animal Poems of Ted Hughes

Ashik Istiak

(Green University of Bangladesh)

Abstract

This paper attempts to explain the animal poems of Ted Hughes in the light of Deconstruction and Psychoanalysis. The paper first presents the physical description of the violent and sometimes exotic animals in many of his animal poems and then tries to explore the hermeneutics of them. The basic aim of the study is to provide enough logic to declare that the vicious animals of Ted Hughes are more humans than animals. The theories: Deconstruction and Psychoanalysis will be applied to find out how the cruelty, the vendetta and the ferociousness of the animals in Hughes' poems go beyond their animal identities. Overall, the article promises food for thought for the readers of Ted Hughes and the English literature learners.

Keywords: Animalia, Break-free Attitude, Deconstruction, Instinct, Violence, Metaphor

1.1 Background and Context

In the writings of Ted Hughes, a reader may find certain different aspects but his most celebrated and discussed ones are- 'war' and 'animal' subject matters. Of these two, if one takes the second area, it will be found that no other poet excelled as much as Ted Hughes to create metaphors in animal imageries (Shekhawat, 2012). This paper elaborates and inspects these metaphors to disclose the symbolic identity created in the back of animal visage.

Ted Hughes has twenty eight animal poems which present his indirect attempt to describe the animal identity in human beings. In many of these twenty eight poems, he glorified the instinctive, impulsive nature of vulnerable and sometimes exotic animals. He glorified the animal view of the surroundings (Nacem, 2010). He presented animals as daunting, dominating and unafraid in any circumstances. Sometimes, he positively described
